New Sports Performance Division
Senior Management Appointment

The Board of TSE is pleased to announce that its wholly-owned subsidiary, TSE Consulting SA ("TSE Consulting"), the international sports management consultancy, is creating a new business to provide its clients with worldwide strategic advice on Sports Performance.

The new division will be headed by Steve Roush, who joins TSE Consulting, having previously been Chief of Sports Performance at the US Olympic Committee, where he oversaw a period of success for USA's Olympians, culminating with Team USA's largest ever medal tally at the Beijing Olympic games.

Steve Roush will be coordinating the provision of services to National Olympic Committees and Governmental agencies worldwide. He will be based at a new TSE Consulting office in Colorado Springs, which will become the second TSE Consulting office in the US, the first being established in Indianapolis in 2006 and headed by Director of TSE Consulting USA, Dale Neuburger.

Lars Haue-Pedersen, Managing Director of TSE Consulting, commented:

"Governments and National Olympic Committees are increasingly seeking to optimise the performances of their sportsmen and women to secure medals at major events. We are excited about the opportunities that this new division provides for many of our clients and we are very pleased that one of the world's leading experts in the field has chosen TSE for the next steps of his career".

Steve Roush, Senior Consultant, TSE Consulting USA, said:

"Following eight wonderful and exciting years at the US Olympic Committee, I am now looking forward to assisting TSE clients around the world in optimising their elite sports programmes and their preparations for the London 2012 Olympic Games and other important events in the future".
